The Becerro Galicano of San Millán de la Cogolla is one of the principal sources for the social, linguistic, political and cultural history of Christian Spain between the ninth and the twelfth centuries. This international symposium of historians and philologists will mark the launch of the digital edition of this cartulary; it will deal with some major aspects which have characterized the development of historical knowledge in recent years: new approaches towards the study of cartularies and, more generally, recent research on sources for both history and philology.

The conference will take place in the very monastery of San Millán and will provide plenty of time for discussion following each paper.

The programme, as well as detailed information on how to obtain grants to facilitate participation of students and young researchers, can be obtained at: www.ehu.es/galicano/coloquio
